A Pilot's Dream "For this shot, I imagined that a pilot who had never seen snow before took his TIE fighter down, climbed out, and touched snow for the first time. He even built a snow lantern."

"I even coined a term... 'The Forced Atmospheric Perspective' effect." "At the time, I had realized that there were no photos of LEGO minifigures in which anyone had really explored old filmmaking techniques."

Goldenrod Portrait One of the most iconic faces in the Star Wars universe belongs to C-3PO.

Looks great as a LEGO minifigure, too. Rough Tatooine Landings "The idea behind this image was that X-wings were not suited to Tatooine's rough terrain. In order to get this shot, I dropped the model from about half a meter and photographed it as it bounced, so that the sand flew upward."

The Walker in the Woods "The tree stump on which I planned to shoot this was basking in sunlight when I set up the shot. Then the sun moved. As passersby watched, I stood in a bush next to a LEGO AT-AT walker waiting for the sun to come back." View larger
